

Stable Your Money, and Your Horse, in a Horizon-Built Structure

If you think you have made up your mind from whom you are going to buy your shed – or, perhaps, your horse barn or gazebo – you owe it to yourself to do one thing before you write any checks.

Call Horizon Structures, or go to their website at www.horizonstructures.com.

Here's why.

The company, based in Atglen, Penn., offers some of the most beautiful, practical and cost effective products on the market. In addition, you will have your new shed, gazebo or horse barn shipped to you in just a couple short weeks, completely constructed and ready to use. Sales and Marketing Manager Jill Siragusa says, "Due to the rising demand of our barns across the US, we have teamed up with Amish carpenters in South Carolina and Texas. This allows our customers in southern and western states to save on transportation. We've been able to ship as far as California because of this."

Horizon Structures is a quick-rising star in the industry, testimony to the skill, dedication, craftsmanship and work ethic of owner David Zook, who was raised Amish and learned the skill of erecting sheds and barns from the time he was old enough to hold a hammer.

In a world of cookie-cutter, assembly line manufacturing, Zook has brought 30 years of knowledge in materials and techniques to a public that seems thirsty for quality, not to mention a bit of personalization. Each building is made-to-order, to the customer's specifications, with materials the 20-plus Amish carpenters employed by the company have learned over hundreds of years work and wear best. It's this type of experience that lends Horizon Structures such great credibility. Customers receive the satisfaction in knowing their order is being built within time-tested traditions of work ethic and pride. It's something you just can't find as often as you used to, and that's what makes the products made in this small Pennsylvania town so special.

"They (the Amish carpenters) really take pride in their work," said Siragusa. "They don't just slap everything together."

Of particular interest, especially to customers out west, is the selection of horse barns offered. It can cost big money to build a horse barn, which is bad news for those who only have one or two horses and keep them on their property. The answer is a custom-built horse barn that is affordable and already built to your specs. The customer must prepare the ground area where the barn is to be set, but once the truck and trailer arrives, the barn is placed and you can immediately begin using it. No construction or assembly is required.

"The prebuilt horse barn is what people are getting excited about," said Siragusa. "Some people don't have enough horses to justify building a $50,000 horse barn. On top of that, you have to hire a crew to build it and it can take a month or more. With our prefabricated horse barns, the time is cut in half and you can even take it with you if you move."

Horizon Structures also offers run-in sheds, hay feeders, storage sheds, double-wide garages, gazebos and stock buildings.

In addition, all products come with a written guarantee. To date, the company has shipped products to 23 states.

For more information, log on to www.horizonstructures.com, or call 1.888.447.4337.

Horizon Structures Toll-Free: 1-888-44SHEDS
 5075 Lower Valley Rd. Phone: (610) 593-7710
 Atglen, PA 19310 Fax: (610) 593-7701
 E-Mail: info@horizonstructures.com

Storage Shed

A Wooden run-in shed is a low-cost yet safe, secure and attractive way to provide year-round shelter for your horses, ponies or other livestock.

We offer a wide variety of outside storage sheds to meet your needs.

Many people also use them for hay or equipment storage.

Run-In Shed

Horse Barns

All Hardware - Powder-Coated Steel

Drop Vent

Stalls Include Oak Kickboard, Grill (or solid) Partition, Slider Window with Bars.

Inside Tack Room

